

ROSA MIRIJANIAN, M.D.

Internal Medicine physician

Dr. Mirijanian graduated Magna Cum Lade from State Medical College in Armenia where she practiced internal medicine for nine years prior to immigrating to the United States. She completed her residency at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Pontiac from 1983 to 1986 and has been practicing in Clarkston since then. Dr. Mirijanian lives in Clarkston with her son, daughter-in-law and grandson. She has a daughter who has a Doctorate in Physical Chemistry and presently works for the NIH. Dr. Mirijanian enjoys classical music and art, and loves going to the opera. In her spare time she enjoys cooking and gardening. Dr. Mirijanian's journey as a physician has been filled with multiple opportunities in teaching as well. She supervised and trained medical residents for St. Joseph Mercy Hospital and was an Assistant Professor at Wayne State University Medical School. In conjunction with her work at Clarkston Internal Medicine she also worked at the Oakland County Mental Health Department and was the medical director for the research on Fragile X Syndrome. The success of the program was recognized in the Oakland Press. Having practiced medicine for more than 30 years, Dr. Mirijanian is a firm believer that a passion to help others, honesty and integrity are the primary components that make a successful physician. One of her main goals as an internal medicine physician is to promote preventative medicine that focuses on cardiovascular disease, cholesterol, high blood pressure and smoking cessation. As a woman and physician she supports woman's health issues, especially breast and genital cancers. She enjoys being a member of this strong medical team in the Clarkston Community and hopes to serve the community for many years to come. Dr. Mirijanian is accepting new patients.
